

Quilting

Women in Colonial America had many skills that helped their families survive. In one day a woman might have to cook, sew, spin wool or flax into string to make cloth, as well as teach their children reading and writing. If they had any scrap materials left from making or mending clothing, they would make quilted blankets to keep their family warm. Below are some quilt patterns to color!

